

Intro: Tell them that reusable cloth towels are better than disposable kitchen towels

BP1: Reduces waste, Saves money

BP2: Takes less storage, lasts longer

BP3: Have to wash them, have to have different cloth towels for other stuff

Although some disagree, reusable cloth kitchen towels are better than disposable ones. This is because reusable towels reduce waste, help the environment, and last for years.

Using reusable cloth towels reduces waste and saves money compared to disposable kitchen towels. Kitchen towels are often made from toxic materials and contribute to landfill waste. Plus, reusable cloth towels can be washed and reused multiple times, so they're more eco-friendly. Additionally, you don't have to buy reusable cloth towels every weekend, like kitchen towels.

Another pro of reusable cloth towels is that they require less storage while lasting longer! Unlike disposable kitchen towels, you can put cloth towels in a small space like a drawer or basket. You also don't have to throw away cloth towels, like kitchen towels. After wiping, you can throw the kitchen towel away while putting the cloth towels in the washing machine.

1 + 1

But cloth towels aren't flawless; there are 2 main cons to using cloth towels. The first one is that you have to wash them every time you get them dirty, or else the cloth towels will get contaminated. The second one is that you have to buy separate cloth towels for different jobs. Wiping up spills in the kitchen cannot be done with the same cloth you use to wipe your face.
