

Q1. Fascinates, passion, overwhelming, abide, deep meaning/connection, great purpose, bond, unreasonable, emotion, feelings, rigor, and determination.

Q2.

Intro: Talk about your story finding guitar, use emotional and swaying words/phrases.

BP1: Talk about how guitar not only fascinates you but gives you a motto to stand by.

BP2: Talk about the connection between you and your guitar and how other players have similar feelings.

BP3: Talk about how people degrade guitar and call it unemotional but instead counter that by saying how it has very meaningful songs and impacts others.

Conclusion: Round up the ending and state the thesis statement again.

Q3. As long as I can recall I've been placed in every type of activity or hobby there is, whether it has been swimming or art, I have never truly felt a passion, a connection with what I do. There is always something new to learn from it. Guitar has always been a fascinating instrument to play with either if it's learning how to play the different fifth measures or string techniques, there is always something new to learn from it. It also serves me a motto to abide with and to not give up on what I love. As someone who plays the guitar it goes to show that guitar is not merely for credit or fame but is for the true passion that comes within, to give in your determination, rigor, time, and effort into playing this instrument, forming a bond between the instrument and the player.

Q4. Out of all the activities that I participate in, the one I do simply for pleasure is guitar.

Q5. 480 words

Intro

As long as I can recall I've been placed in every type of activity or hobby there is, whether it has been swimming or art, I have never truly felt a passion, a connection with what I do. I vividly remember the day where I saw someone in the downtown of D.C, someone was playing this beautiful riff on the guitar and it moved me and that was the moment where I knew my true passion would be guitar and only guitar. Till this day out of all the activities that I participate in, the one I simply do for pleasure is guitar.

BP1

Guitar has always been a fascinating instrument to play with either if it's learning how to play the different fifth measures or string techniques, there is always something new to learn from it. Though for some it might be overwhelming, for me it shows that no matter if you are a professional or a beginner, there is always something new to learn. It also serves me a motto to abide with and to not give up on what I love.

BP2

The instrument has also served a great purpose in my life, to support me and stick with me at all times. I look back on when I had tough times in my life and it seemed when everything and everyone had faced their backs on me, it felt as if I could rely on my guitar to be there for me. I've not only seen this connection with my instrument but I've seen other instrumentalists have this same deep connection with the instruments that they play. While others have their own connections with loved ones or other hobbies, I too have this deep connecting bond with the instrument of my own.

BP3

Many people might argue with the fact that guitar might not be for everyone and that guitarists glorify the instrument. I would truly disagree with that. Many musical critics who despise guitars, solely hate them due to unreasonable explanations such as shredders, a type of guitar style "don't have any feel or emotion in their music", a critic responding to Herman Li, a famous guitarist known for shredding. Though that might be what you feel, there are many different ways of playing guitar and have much thought emotion and feelings put into it such as Recuerdos de la Alhambra by Francisco Tárrega is reviewed by not only critics but by guitarists and non guitarists as one of the most emotionally moving songs played on the guitar.

Conclusion

As someone who plays the guitar it goes to show that guitar is not merely for credit or fame but is for the true passion that comes within, to give in your determination, rigor, time, and effort into playing this instrument, forming a bond between the instrument and the player. This is why I play guitar for a passion.