~~former~~ ~~I think that~~ we should use reusable kitchen towels rather than disposable ones because they help save our planet and you can use them again, along with the fact that disposable kitchen towels would be too expensive from buying disposable towels on and on. You can use reusable ones for months before getting a new towel. ~~These are some of the reasons why I feel like reusable towels are better than disposable.~~

Statement

If we use reusable kitchen towels, then it will help the environment because you are not wasting resources every week. This is also better because you get to pay less money than you do for disposable kitchen towels. Using these towels can help save animals' lives in the wild because most of the resources to make these towels are in the wild, so if we use less of them, then we could help save an animal's life.

Support for this.

Even though reusable towels are good for the environment, they could get dirty because of too much use, you could easily give it a wash and it will be clean. In spite of the fact disposable towels clean up messes faster, they are a one time use and cost $2.49 per roll. This means that these are way too expensive and that they are only good for one time, when the reusable towel is better for once and beyond.

In conclusion, I think that we should use reusable kitchen towels because they help preserve the environment, they are less money, and they help take care of spills for future needs. Disposable towels help for one time and cost money that it shouldn't be at.
