Essay: Many people have their pleasures or hobbies, mine is not that uncommon too. My hobby is something most people my age would do and that is to read. I know reading doesn't seem that special for a hobby, I mean it's something everyone does every day, it's a necessity, but let me tell you why I read. Reading helps you do many things, it gives you knowledge, a better understanding of the things around you, and it's a way to see people's perspective of everything that's happening in our world, even though that's hard sometimes. The reason I read though is that it helps me be calm and relaxed. Sometimes I'm cluttered in work and chores and to ignore everything, I pick up a book and take a peek inside to the magical world the author has created. The only other reason I read books is that it grows my own imagination. If I read a book about mystery and see the personality of the detective or the crook and see all the plot elements to see what transpired, I feel kind of inclined to try to see if I could make a mystery of my own. Some might say that TV or movies could be a replacement to reading, but I disagree. I do watch T.V. a lot though, as a teen does, it's just that I disagree that T.V. could replace books. In books, I feel that it has to be more sophisticated while in television I feel the script has less thought taken into it as human emotion could be easily portrayed. Also in books it could be limitless as writing could show anything while in T.V. there's a limit. In conclusion, reading is something I do for the pleasure of it because it gives me a calm state of mind and it grows my imagination.

Essay:

I also talked about how television wasn't the same as reading and proved it. To be fair I do many other things for pleasure, so I will have some things I also do and give the reason about why I do it. I play video games because of the people I meet. The people I play sometimes are nice, giving good information on how I could do better or how I can improve. I also play video games for a challenge to see how ways I could challenge myself like better aim or what should I do if this happened. Sure sometimes there's people who're ~~mean or toxic~~ <sup>not so good</sup> who make me feel negative emotions but in most of my games I usually meet great people.
