

Reading Passage: My Adventures as a Young Explorer (Autobiography 3)

Hello, my name is Sam, and I love exploring new places! I was born in a small town with my mom, dad, and two older sisters. From a young age, I loved going on adventures and discovering new things in nature.

When I was five years old, my family went on a camping trip to the mountains. It was my first time sleeping in a tent and hiking in the forest. I was so excited to see the tall trees, sparkling streams, and colorful flowers. I even saw a deer and some rabbits!

For my sixth birthday, my parents gave me a special backpack with all the tools an explorer needs: a magnifying glass, a compass, and a notebook to draw and write about my discoveries. I loved using my magnifying glass to look closely at bugs and leaves. My dad taught me how to use the compass to find my way.

When I started school, I joined the nature club. Our teacher, Mr. Green, took us on nature walks and taught us about different plants and animals. I made lots of friends in the club, and we enjoyed exploring together.

Last year, our nature club went on a big adventure to a national park. We hiked up a mountain and saw a beautiful waterfall. I took lots of pictures and wrote about the trip in my notebook. It was one of the best days ever!

Now, I am seven years old, and I still love exploring. I dream of traveling around the world to discover new places and learn about different cultures. Exploring makes me happy, and I want to share my adventures with everyone.
