We do things that make us happy, but for me, I also see it as a way to make friends. When I started to play tennis, I barely knew anyone outside of my school. Now, after 6 years of playing tennis, I know and am friends with many people. Making friends through sports makes me happy, and I have found some of my best friends through playing tennis. Another example is when I started going to play tournaments, I started to interact with more people. I was pretty shy, so playing tennis made me ~~less of an introvert~~ <sup>more extrovert</sup>. I really love to play tennis and how much it is given to me. <sup>appreciate</sup>

Another thing I <sup>at what?</sup> enjoy doing is playing or making music. When I first started playing piano, I was amazed and really loved it. I still like to play the piano and find it is an escape from the world. I enjoy the process of learning new songs. ~~But my favorite thing is trying other instruments.~~ <sup>also</sup> I like to play and experiment with as many instruments as I can. I also find pleasure in making my own songs. I use a music making software, and I find it to really connect me to music. It takes all of my boredom away. When I play or make music, I feel like I escape into my own world of joy.

However, some people may say you need to prioritize school. That is right, you should keep school above everything else. But you need to do activities you enjoy so you keep yourself happy. If you don't do something you like for a while, you will get stressed. This happens a lot to me. If I don't play tennis, I can't focus in school because I am unhappy. Overall, there needs to be a good balance between school and activities you find pleasure in. ✓

Some things I like to do is make or play music, and play tennis and other sports. Some people may say you should focus on school, but you need to keep a balance between activities you like and education. I think without having something you really like, a person would be very unhappy. Overall, an activity that gives you pleasure is super important for you to do, as it also creates opportunities that will definitely help you.
