

Reading Passage: Jack's Magical Kite (Fiction 3)

One windy afternoon, Jack found a bright red kite in his attic. It was old but still beautiful. Jack had never flown a kite before and was very excited to try.

Jack ran to the park with his kite. The wind was perfect for flying. He held the string tightly and let the kite go up into the sky. It soared higher and higher, dancing in the wind. Jack was thrilled to see it flying so well.

Suddenly, the kite started glowing and sparkling. Jack couldn't believe his eyes. "Wow! This kite is magical!" he said. The kite pulled him gently, leading him to a hidden path in the park.

Jack followed the path and found himself in a magical land. The trees were made of candy, and the flowers sang sweet songs. Jack saw fairies flying around and animals that could talk. He knew he was in a special place.

A friendly fairy named Luna flew up to Jack. "Welcome to Magicland," she said with a smile. "Your kite brought you here because you have a kind heart."

Jack was amazed. He spent the day exploring Magicland with Luna. They played games, ate candy from the trees, and talked to the animals. Jack even helped a little bird find its way home.

As the sun began to set, Luna said, "It's time for you to go back, Jack. But you can visit us anytime you fly your magical kite."

Jack thanked Luna and held onto his kite tightly. The kite gently pulled him back to the park. Jack was back, but he knew he had experienced something incredible.

From that day on, Jack often flew his magical kite, hoping to visit Magicland again. He always remembered to be kind and helpful, just like Luna had said.
