

Adam B
Feb 18th

6/10

According to What's next, Shrek starring the Rock? Hollywood's addiction to live action remakes of animated classics, Hollywood has been using remakes and live action remasters in order to make more money. According to the article it has been getting excessive. This belief stems from the announcement of a How to train your dragon live action remake. The article worries about the film getting across the same cuteness from some dragons and the gore that will come from the loss of Toothless's leg. ✓

Time - ?

Hypertension: over average blood levels. ✓
Hyperventilate: breathing over the average level ✓
Hyperactive: overly active ✓
Hypersensitive: overly emotional ✓
Hypercritical: overly critical ✓

10/10

Hypodermic: things under the skin ✓
Hypoventilation: low breathing ✓
Hypochondriac: one who is 'under' estimating his current health status as poorer than it really is ✓
Hypocritical: being 'under' critical of oneself when pretending to be something one is not ✓
Hypotenuse: side of a right triangle that is stretched 'under' the right angle ✓

I want to study at AOS/AET for several reasons. {For one thing the fact that I studied there would look good on any college application but that is not the only reason.} The makerspace there is amazing and I am sure it could help me further my ^{good} research into AI. Places like AOS/AET would be great to learn about many things. It would also have more focused programs specifically for engineering. In conclusion, the reasons I would like to study at AOS/AET are looking good on college applications, the high tech things, and the focused specific programs.

honest! But not a good enough reason.

math & science - ?

It is one of a kind.

