

Reading Passage: The Story of Helen Keller(Biography 1)

Helen Keller was a very special girl who lived a long time ago. She was born in 1880 in Alabama, USA. When Helen was just a baby, she became very sick. The sickness made her deaf and blind, which means she couldn't hear or see like other children.

Even though Helen couldn't hear or see, she was a smart and curious girl. She learned to communicate using sign language. Sign language is a way of talking with your hands instead of your voice. Helen could feel the signs and understand what people were saying to her.

When Helen was six years old, her parents hired a teacher named Anne Sullivan. Miss Sullivan was patient and kind. She taught Helen how to read and write using her hands. Helen was very excited to learn new things.

With Miss Sullivan's help, Helen learned to read books by feeling raised letters with her fingers. She loved to read stories about brave knights and magical lands. Helen also learned to write using a special machine called a typewriter.

As Helen grew older, she wanted to help other people with disabilities. She traveled all around the world and gave speeches. She told people that anyone can achieve their dreams with hard work and determination.
